THE SUPREME COURT.

It Will be an Independent Tribunal in the State.

Judiciary, Irrigation, Militia Apportionment Executive Chapters.

Warm Discussions on Judiciary and Apportionment.

The Public Printer Gets Mad and Quits the Job.

THAT SUPREME COURT.

Potter of Laramie precipitated a discussion when he presented an amendment to the supreme court chapter providing that the upper tribunal should consist of the four district judges, three only to sit on the same case, that at the expiration of six years the legislature might provide for a separate court.

Burrill of Johnson taxed the gentleman with inconsistency and Mr. Potter tacitly admitted it.

The amendment was seconded by Morgan of Laramie, who agreed with his col that the new scheme was expedient, economical and more popular.

Clark of Uinta said he had refrained so much as he could from talking while the supreme court proposition had been battered from pillar to post; the able arguments of Mr. Potter for a separate supreme court had satisfied him and he could not account for the gentleman's change of heart. It could only be attributed to the delegate's insane desire to amend propositions. If the people were treated justly they would be given a separate supreme court.

Harvey of Converse was agnostic at the remarkable course taken by Mr. Potter. He called for that gentleman's authority for asserting with such confidence that the people did not wish a distinct supreme court.

Barrow of Converse favored the amendment on the score of expense. If $8,000 to $10,000 a year could be saved it would remove one of the most potent arguments against statehood. Maj. Baldwin had gone home muttering against this unnecessary expense.

Hoyt of Albany held that a man might change his opinion without being inconsistent. He had prepared an amendment similar in import to Mr. Potter's.

Riner of Laramie made quite a speech and was frequently applauded. Release from territorial vassalage was the desirable goal and no one would oppose a constitution providing the proper machinery for a state government and such a document would not be perfect unless it provided for an independent supreme court. The right of appeal is an inherent privilege of the people. The speaker had talked with citizens throughout the territory and was convinced that they desired a separate court of appeal. The additional expense will be only $6,000, and if the people of Wyoming could not bear this expense for one of the essentials of state government the convention had better adjourn without day and Wyoming continue to be a ward of the United States.

Holden of Uinta was violently opposed to the amendment and spoke earnestly on the subject taking the ground that failure to provide for an independent supreme court would be a gross injustice to the people. Mr. Holden said that this measure for a separate tribunal had been charged to the attorneys in the convention. He wished to say that he was just a ranchman, but could see that the amendment was wrong. Later Holden interrupted Preston to say that Maj. Baldwin had told him that he was convinced that there should be a separate court; but thought the expense would be too great.

Preston of Fremont made a rattling speech for the independent court.

Campbell said he had not made a speech since last Monday but could not refrain from stating his conviction that there should be a distinct upper court. The people of Wyoming were neither biotied nor stingy and would not reject statehood to save $6,000 a year.

Sutherland of Albany said that Maj. Baldwin has expressed varying opinions on the subject now under discussion.

Clark of Uinta quoted Judge Corn, who had said "it is not to be forgotten that the supreme court interprets the laws."

Coffeen of Sheridan made a crisp and characteristic address on the subject. "The greatest good for the greatest number" was the tenor of it.

In behalf of the amendment Mr. Morgan made a fair and logical speech. The expense would be too great, he was certain.

President Brown could not imagine a constitution which did not provide for a proper supreme court. The people were liable to reject a document which only set up a mongrel court. "Do not, I beg of you," concluded the president, "sell justice for $6,000 a year."

Baxter of Laramie held that a distinct supreme court was essential to the proper administration of justice.

Smith of Carbon said the chief argument for statehood was that the courts would be proper and just.

Hay of Laramie said justice was not being sold, that establishment of a supreme court was postponed for only a few years.

Elliott explained his vote. The future was not the only consideration. Think of the present. He favored the amendment. The vote was ayes 17, noes 21, the amendment being rejected.

ADOPTION.
The reading of the chapter on judiciary proceeded. These are the salient points:

Three districts, first, Laramie, Converse and Crook; second, Albany, Johnson and Sheridan; third, Carbon, Sweetwater, Uinta and Fremont; legislature may increase number of districts and judges, but shall not remove a district; senate is a court of impeachment; other courts are supreme, district, justices and arbitration; supreme court judges elected for eight years; meet twice a year at capital; judge must have been at bar for nine years and be 30 years of age; district judge must be 28 years of age and two years a resident of the state.

OF IRRIGATION.
An excellent speech by Burrill of Johnson preceded final reading and adoption of the irrigation chapter. Water is the property of the state and shall be divided by a board of the state engineer, to serve six years and four superintendents. Priority of appropriation for beneficial purposes gives the better right.

President Brown voted no. He said that the bill gave the state all water, and then set forth that priority gave the better right. This, he said, gave corporations an opportunity to defraud the people.

APPORTIONMENT.
An effort was made to postpone consideration of the two reports of the apportionment committee, but several members who will be absent to-morrow urged that they be taken up immediately. This was carried. The convention went into committee of the whole, with Campbell of Laramie in the chair. This is the apportionment of the two reports:

Majority—Albany, 2 senators and 3 representatives; Carbon, 2 and 5; Converse, 1 and 2; Crook, 1 and 2; Fremont, 1 and 2; Laramie, 3 and 6; Johnson, 1 and 1; Sheridan, 1 and 1; Sweetwater, 2 and 3; Uinta, 2 and 3. Sixteen senators and thirty representatives.

Minority—Albany, 2 and 4; Carbon, 2 and 4; Converse, 1 and 2; Crook, 1 and 2; Fremont, 1 and 2; Laramie, 3 and 6; Johnson, 1 and 2; Sheridan, 1 and 2; Sweetwater, 1 and 3; Uinta, 1 and 2. Fifteen senators and thirty representatives.

Baxter of Laramie suggested that provision be made for float members.

Coffeen made an eloquent appeal for his county, urging the adoption of the minority report.

Barrow protested on behalf of Converse and Crook counties. Neither Sheridan nor Johnson were entitled to so much representation as they.

Irvine of Converse gave some figures. Clark, Hoyt, Morgan, Conway, Hay, Smith and Preston spoke to the question.

Palmer of Sweetwater moved that the committee recommend adoption by the convention of the majority report. Carried, and President Brown took the chair again.

The convention adopted the report of the committee of the whole, and it is now practically settled that the legislative representation will be as indicated in the majority report.

STATE MILITIA.
It shall consist of all able bodied citizens between the ages of 18 and 45; all exempt scruples averse to carrying arms excepting militia; legislature shall provide for regulation of militia, following the statutes for the government of the armies of the United States; officers are to be commissioned by the governor; no banner representing any sect, society or nationality other than militia of America; governor is commander in chief, and shall have power to call out state troops to execute the laws, suppress insurrection or repel invasion. Adopted.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.
Governor's term, four years; must be citizen aged 30, five years resident of state, not eligible to other office while governor; if election results in tie legislature shall decide it on joint ballot; is commander of state militia; may convene legislature on extraordinary occasions; shall deliver a message to each legislature; has pardoning power except in cases of treason or impeachment; may suspend sentence for treason, until legislature convenes; secretary shall assume powers of executive when governor is absent or disabled; may fill an office by appointment in an emergency; has the usual veto power; if he accept bribe or bribes or menaces legislator he shall be retired from office, punished by law and forfeit right of office holding; there shall be a secretary of state, auditor, treasurer and superintendent of public instruction, citizens over 25 years of age term of office four years; four years must intervene between terms of office of the same person as treasurer; legislature may provide for other officers; salary of governor $2,500, secretary, auditor, treasurer and superintendent of instruction $2,500; all fees are to be covered in to the state treasury; legislature may provide for a state examiner to be appointed by the governor and confirmed by the senate; he shall examine the accounts of all officers having the custody of public money and report at least once annually, the seal of the territory shall be the seal of the state. Adopted.

EIGHT HOURS.
Jones of Uinta offered this proposition: "No more than eight hours actual work shall constitute a lawful day's work in all mines and on all state and municipal work."

THE PRINTING.
The convention printing committee yesterday sent a proposition down to Mr. Slack's store to be printed. He sent the copy back without a word. This extraordinary action was explained to the convention when Chairman Chaplin read a communication to the body. It was from the committee and had been addressed to Mr. Slack, the gentleman who was so anxious to help the good cause along earlier in the session. It called the gentleman's attention to the fact that he was not following the specifications of the printing contract in that he was using an inferior quality of paper and had failed to fold and bind the ills as agreed. Mr. Chaplin suggested the printing be given to the next lowest bidder of to some one who cared to do the work.

Barrow of Converse thought that Mr. Slack should first be consulted. So did Irvine of Converse.

Hoyt of Albany inquired if a contract had been executed.

Chaplin said that the written specifications had been shown to the bidders and were understood, by all.

On motion the entire matter was left to the printing committee, and the work will probably be given to an establishment that can handle it. The printing as executed by the Sun has lately been very unsatisfactory. A common grade of dirty looking brown paper has been used instead of the heavy cap stipulated; the ink was poor and blurred; numerous typographical errors occurred, and the work was neither folded nor bound. One bill sent to the printer last Tuesday was returned only yesterday. When a demurrer at the unnecessary delay was sent by the sergeant-at-arms the official was told to inform the committee that if they were dissatisfied they might take the work elsewhere.

MARINE NEWS.

This was a popular form of check yesterday: "Pay to Mr. Niseman or order $20 on account Deronda. A Sure-thing."

People who attend the convention have noticed that Mr. Hoyt of Albany has the facial contour and expression of a tragedian and looks like Edwin Booth, while President Brown bears a striking resemblance to Roscoe Conkling.

Preston, the shrewd young delegate from Fremont wants to bet Mr. Goodell a bale of blankets that the Indians on the reservation near his home own ponies that can beat Deronda. He also declares that T. A. Kent was offered the shattered idol for use on the street car line, but said he was too slow for the business. With the returns all in it will probably be found that Preston did not like the field Friday.

Surveyor General Richards is a delightful host at his luxurious office in the capitol. The other afternoon Capt. Nick O'Brien and a LEADER reporter were calling on Mr. Richards when Capt. O'Brien said that when marching at Milwaukee the perspiration made his coat so wet that he had to borrow another from an armory. He said the pockets were about half full of water and that all in all it was a pretty warm day. This reminded the reporter of a city man who once related that at Yuma, Arizona, the thermometer registered 160° in the shade and that it was poor shade—only a few willows. Some one called his attention to the fact that water boiled at 140°. The citizen calmly remarked that he had neglected to say water in the red River was boiling that very day. Surveyor General Richards came to the front with a fish story. A friend of his had once favored a select party with a graphic description of how he had battled two hours with a fish before landing it. He struggled until nearly exhausted, but landed the prey. "How big was it?" inquired some one. "I can't say," was the reply. "I dislike to be inaccurate, and could neither weigh nor measure the fish, but I remember that the lake was a perfect circle half a mile in diameter, and the water fell about twenty-three inches when I hauled him out." Frank Bond inquired if Doug Rhodes knew this congress was in session, and the party commenced talking about county division.

A very clever man about town who made a little dump on Deronda last Tuesday dallied somewhat with the flowing bowl as a consolation. Next day he was on the quarterstretch talking rather incoherently of the beaten favorite. He collared a roughly clad but intelligent looking attache of some racing stable and opened on him thusly: "I bet you $2,000 to $1,000 that Deronda can beat Limerick and ride him myself. Will you take it? You dare not take it up." "Well," said the horse man with great deliberation and seeming earnestness, "I'll think about it, but if I'm not around with the money by 12 o'clock to-night you needn't sit up any longer for me." Then he went over and "swiped" somebody's beer from the long counter.

A gentleman who delights in being called clever played it pretty cute on his friends at the races Friday. His party was for Deronda first, last and all the time, but he only looked wise and smiled knowingly when asked his opinion. Just before the race he slipped down to the betting paddock and commenced investing in pools. He took $40 worth of Deronda, $30 of Wyoming, $20 of Fearnaught and $10 of Limerick at the post odds. He distributed the cards in different pockets and memorized the location. When Limerick landed a winner the thoughtful man leered at his friends with the cold smile of an oyster and going into his upper left hand vest pocket displayed Limerick tickets calling for $60 and costing only $10. Of course he was about $20 loser and couldn't possibly have won on that sort of a play but he made his friends think that he was one of the shrewdest horsemen in the world. He told them that anyone might have known that Limerick was the best horse of the lot.

The first day of the fair a couple of men engaged in an altercation near the Art hall. One had a big revolver in a belt, and with his hand on the weapon abused the other man like a yellow dog, applying to him every vile epithet in the decalogue. The abuse was taken quietly. After a while a police officer happened along and induced the armed man to lay aside his artillery. He still felt belligerent, however, and went down to the bar in search of his enemy. He found him. They met, and the man who had half an hour before seemed meek and lowly quickly noticed the absence of the six-shooter and slugged his tormentor in approved style. A number of people who had followed the thing all along were delighted.

Moral reflection—Experience is a high priced pedagogic race week.

PERSONAL POINTS.
Frank Irvine of Denver is visiting the city.

John H. Keene has returned from Omaha.

A. L. Mauk and family, Rawlins people, are at the Inter Ocean.

Geo. T. Larrybedee, San Francisco, is a Hotel Normandy guest.

George Boughton, Union Pacific ticket agent at Laramie and a crack billiard player, is in Cheyenne.

The Show.
Karl Gardner's sweet singing delighted a fair audience at the opera house last evening. The play Fatherland, is in part a charming picture of the ideal of Tyrolese home life and in part the sort that goes best with beer and pretzels, but the audience was satisfied. Of the support James R. Garrey and Wm. Dell were good.
