AGENDA FOR THE OPENING PLENARY SESSION

POINTS TO MAKE

- 6 June Agenda clearly now needs revision:
 - First four items (commitment to six principles, etc) completed last month;
 - Initial items for resumed plenary should now be the two areas on which we have been conferring (adoption of Agenda and Procedural Rules).
 - Believe we should then deal with the two further items listed in Chairmen's 3 July note as the level of progress we should aim to make by end-July:
 - appointment of Business Committee; and
 - opening statements by participants.
- [IF RAISED: Know that UUP think opening statements could come later, but it must surely be valuable for participants to set out early on the aspirations and objectives they bring to the process].
- Two remaining issues to be accommodated are the need to address the International Body's proposals on decommissioning, and the discussion and adoption of a comprehensive agenda for the negotiations.
 - HMG's approach to these issues is based on acceptance of the compromise approach to decommissioning in paragraphs 34 and 35 of the International Body's Report, under which "some decommissioning would take place during the process of all-party negotiations, rather than before or after". The Report argues that this approach "offers the parties an opportunity to build confidence one step at a time As progress is made on political issues, even modest mutual steps on decommissioning could help create the atmosphere needed for further steps in a progressive pattern of mounting trust and confidence".

- This points to parallel progress on political negotiations and decommissioning as the best way of achieving a start to decommissioning during the negotiations. The procedural expression of this for the opening plenary is surely to interleave a full opportunity for participants to address the decommissioning proposals and similarly to discuss and agree a comprehensive agenda.
- Important to be clear about the substance of the address to decommissioning. Believe the 6 June proposals can still be of use here. International Body found that a start to physical decommissioning would only take place in parallel with the political negotiations - so unrealistic to hope to achieve that start, or even commitment to a firm date for starting, in the opening plenary before the three strands of the negotiations have been launched. But it is evidently legitimate and necessary to look in the opening plenary for clear indications of good intent to work constructively and in good faith to secure the implementation of the Report, including the compromise approach to decommissioning.
- [IF RAISED: It would be a serious mistake in our view to provide that negotiations in the strands could not begin until there was a concrete timetable for decommissioning. This would jettison the moral authority and practical realism which underpins the International Body's compromise approach, and would in reality imperil rather than facilitate the goal we all share of completely removing illegal weapons from the scene].
- The 6 June "Scenario" paper proposed that the Independent

Chairman should be invited to report to the Plenary on these "clear indications". This proposal has been criticised, but I believe on a mistaken basis. Never suggested that the Chairman should make a private judgement which would be binding on the negotiations - he would report his view "after open discussion in the plenary", and it would then be for the Plenary itself to consider the next steps. But since this has proved controversial, and is not a key feature, we would certainly contemplate alternative arrangements. One option might be for all participants to commit themselves in the Plenary to work constructively to implement all aspects of the Report - on the lines of the public statement recording commitment to the Principles.

- Once satisfaction on the commitment of all participants is achieved - and in the light of the discussions in the Plenary - the Government would then propose the establishment of a sub-committee to take forward the work on decommissioning, including agreement on the modalities on the lines set out in paragraphs 36/50 of the Report. (These guidelines include the principle that decommissioning should be mutual). Others of course are free to make their own proposals.
- On the comprehensive agenda, we would aim to put forward the draft circulated on 6 June, with some updating to reflect the discussions since then. Again, other participants can of course put forward their own ideas.
- To sum up, we believe that the Opening Plenary should
 - give full consideration to the International Body's decommissioning proposals, including establishing participants' commitment to work constructively and in good faith to achieve the compromise approach and considering machinery to take the work forward;
 - discuss and adopt a comprehensive Agenda for the negotiations;

- launch the agreed decommissioning machinery and the three-stranded negotiations together at the end of the Plenary, so that negotiations would proceed in the strands at the same time as work is going on to implement a start to decommissioning during the negotiations.
- The revised draft Agenda we have prepared [A] reflects this approach.
- [UUP ONLY: This new agenda moves a long way towards the UUP position compared with the 6 June draft. Eg
 - the subjective role of the Chairman is removed;
 - the discussion of decommissioning moves up the agenda, so that it is completed (apart from the launch of the "agreed machinery") before the comprehensive agenda is discussed and adopted;
 - the agenda is neutrally phased, with no prejudgement of the outcome and with all participants free to put forward their own proposals;
 - we would still support the "review Plenary" envisaged for the end of September to take stock of progress across the whole process. And this could be developed into a firm timetable of further periodic reviews - eg monthly after September. There would thus be continuing leverage over the decommissioning issue].
- [DUP ONLY: Note that the DUP draft agenda suggests that the Plenary should consider the terms upon which other parties might be admitted to the negotiations at a later stage. Important to register that the Act lays a statutory duty on the Secretary of State in respect of inviting or refraining from inviting parties to the negotiations (sections 2(2) and (3)). So while Plenary could certainly discuss this issue, that discussion would not in practice add to or subtract from the statutory duty created by the Act].
