The National Archives reference PREM 49/117

BY: SBRITISH EMBASSY; 9-17-97 2:47PM; 2028984455 => 08 16 97 TUE 15:44 FAX 202 456 9150 EUROPEAN DIR

0171 839 9044;

12.001

#3/3

-> 55F. 7859

THE WHITE HOUSE

Office of the Press Secretary Washington, D.C.

9/16/97

for Immediate Release

STATEMENT BY THE PRESS SECRETARY

Northern Treland Peace Talks

The Administration sharply condemns today's car bombing in Marketnill, Northern Ireland. This was a cruelude effort by extremists opposed to a peaceful settlement, aimed at disrupting the all party talks that started yesterday in Belfast. We urge the UUP and all other parties not to allow the enemies of peace to divert them from the important task of finding a lasting and just solution for the people of Northern Ireland. Our sympathy goes to the residents who suffered the devastation and shock of the blast. We hope that those responsible will be brought swiftly to justice.

Yesterday marked a historic moment in the Northern Ireland peace process. Senator George Mitchell presided over the first plenary session open to all parties. We note Sinn Fein's signing up to the Mitchell Principles which represent an absolute commitment to non-violence in the process, We firmly believe that an inclusive process of dialogue and negotiation offers the only way to resolve the issues which divide the communities and traditions of Northern Ireland.

The United States continues to be prepared to support the British and Irish governments, and all the parties prepared to enter into this process. In particular, we welcome the Ulster Unionist Party decision Saturday to give its negotiators a mandate for the talks process.

These Proceptes explosibles

the real force by those we threfore the real force by those we threfore by the this to you will as will be a different to you want to will be all to the whiteal porties a and and indered and